

Her Craft

Stitching the Future

ORGANIZATION OVERVIEW

Her Craft: Stitching the Future, founded by 14-year-old Afghan-American Taiba Rahmani in Arlington, VA, is a movement empowering Afghan girls and young women (ages 12 to 26) who face severe restrictions under Taliban rule, including bans on education beyond sixth grade and the constant threat of forced marriage to wealthy men abroad or Taliban soldiers. Her Craft provides a holistic approach to resilience and independence by offering U.S. college sponsorships (funded by allocating 35% of all revenue), annual 30-day skill development workshops in Afghanistan, and income through the global sale of their high-quality, Western-styled handmade crafts. Artisans face significant risks sourcing materials, holding collective meetings, and navigating currency exchanges under constant surveillance, supported by unsung male allies who assist with safe passage and shipping. Through education, skill-building, and cultural preservation, Her Craft connects these young women to international markets and helps them reclaim futures of hope, resilience, and financial independence.
